

Abstract

There are extensive literature on data management are available in social research but they are too complex for beginners. The objective of this papers is to explicate the fundamentals of data management by deeply linking the level of measurement which the scholars used to collect data, sampling methods and purpose of the research. The expected outcome of this paper is to enable the research scholars to design, conduct research and analyse data on their own without depending on anyone.